Proposed Addition — RRSP withdrawals for education

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: RRSP withdrawals for learning

(4) That provisions be introduced governing withdrawals from registered retirement savings plans used for learning in accordance with the proposals described in the Budget Papers tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 24, 1998.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Tax-free RRSP withdrawals for lifelong learning

Lifelong learning is a key factor in preserving future employment income. However, individuals may have limited access to financial resources when the need for training occurs. For many people, the most readily available source of funds is their registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs). Although saving for retirement is important, keeping or finding a job is crucial to preserving retirement income.

The budget therefore proposes to allow RRSP withdrawals for skills enhancement. Eligible individuals will be able to make tax-free withdrawals from an RRSP (other than a locked-in RRSP) to finance full-time training or education for themselves or their spouses. Withdrawals may not exceed $10,000 in a year. More than one withdrawal may be made in any given year from any number of specific RRSP accounts, provided that the annual limit is not exceeded. Withdrawals under this plan are permitted for a withdrawal period of up to four calendar years, provided that the total amount withdrawn does not exceed $20,000. However, the withdrawal period for a participant in the plan must end before the start of a year for which repayment by the participant is required in accordance with rules described below.

RRSP funds may be withdrawn under the plan where the recipient, or the recipient's spouse, is enrolled, or committed to enrol, as a full-time student in a qualifying educational program of at least three month's duration at an eligible educational institution. However, a disabled student may qualify as a student under the plan whether or not studying on a full-time basis. Where RRSP funds are withdrawn before the enrolment of the recipient or the recipient's spouse, the enrolment must occur in the year of the RRSP withdrawal or in January of the following year.

Special rules apply where RRSP funds are withdrawn under the plan and the student does not finish the qualifying educational program. Under these circumstances, an RRSP withdrawal in respect of a program is still considered to have been received under the plan if any of the following three conditions are met:

(a) the student withdraws from the program more than two months after the year of the RRSP withdrawal;

(b) less than 75% of the student's tuition is refundable as a consequence of leaving a program; or

(c) the student enrols in another qualifying educational program on a timely basis.

In all other cases, the RRSP withdrawal will be included in the recipient's income unless the recipient repays the RRSP withdrawal and files an approved form with Revenue Canada. Where this procedure is followed, the RRSP withdrawal is not included in computing income and the recipient is treated as having not participated in the plan.

Where RRSP withdrawals have been made under the plan for a student's education, the recipient is not permitted to withdraw RRSP funds under the plan for the education of the student's spouse while the recipient has an outstanding balance under the plan. This restriction will limit administrative complexity associated with the calculation of repayments required under the plan.

RRSP withdrawals under the plan will generally be repayable by the recipient, without interest, in equal instalments over a period of 10 years to any RRSP under which the recipient is the annuitant. The first repayment must be made no later than 60 days after the fifth year following the year of the first withdrawal. However, repayments will be required to start earlier if the student fails to qualify for a full-time education tax credit for at least three months in each of two consecutive years in the four years following the year of the first withdrawal. Where this is the case, the earlier repayment is required to start no later than 60 days after the second of those two years. As under the Home Buyers' Plan, any amount not repaid for a year as required by a recipient will be included in computing the recipient's income for the year, and a recipient will be permitted to repay amounts faster than required.

There is no specific limit on the number of times an individual can participate in the plan. However, an individual may not participate in a new plan before the end of the year in which all repayments from any previous participation have been made.

Recipients of RRSP withdrawals under the plan must be Canadian residents. If a recipient subsequently emigrates from Canada, the recipient's outstanding balance under the plan will generally be included in the recipient's income to the extent that the recipient does not repay the balance within 60 days from the time of emigration. This is consistent with a similar rule under the Home Buyers' Plan. Rules on the death of a participant under the plan will also parallel those under the Home Buyers' Plan.

As the purpose of the plan is to provide access to existing RRSP funds, no deduction will be provided for an RRSP contribution made less than 90 days before its withdrawal under the plan.

RRSP withdrawals may be made under the plan after 1998.

This measure is expected to cost about $40 million in 1999-2000.

Registered Education Savings Plans

Proposed Amendment — Grants to supplement RESPs

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Registered education savings plans (RESPs)

(6) That measures consequential on the introduction of the Canada Education Savings Grant (CESG) program be introduced in accordance with the proposals described in the Budget Papers tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 24, 1998.

(7) That, for 1998 and subsequent years, measures be introduced to provide for

(a) the recovery of CESGs to the extent that the total of all amounts each of which is the CESG portion of an educational assistance payment made under an RESP to a taxpayer in the year or a preceding year exceeds $7,200, and

(b) a deduction in respect of the CESG recovery amount in computing the taxpayer's income.

(8) That, for 1999 and subsequent years, the lifetime limit on RESP income distributions that can be exempted from the 20 per cent tax payable under Part X.5 of the Act, where there are corresponding deductions in respect of contributions to registered retirement savings plans, be increased from $40,000 to $50,000.

(9) That, as a condition for registration, an education savings plan submitted after 1998 for registration prohibit educational assistance payments to an individual enrolled in an educational program of less than 3 months duration, unless the program is of at least 3 weeks duration and either

(a) the payment does not exceed the individual's cost of tuition plus $300 times the number of weeks in the program, or

(b) the payment is approved by the Department of Human Resources Development.

(10) That, as a condition for registration, an education savings plan submitted after 1998 for registration that allows more than one beneficiary at any one time not allow an individual to become a beneficiary after the individual attains 21 years of age.

(11) That, where an individual under 21 years of age replaces another individual as a beneficiary under an RESP after 1997 and both individuals are connected to the RESP's subscriber by blood relationship or adoption, none of the contributions made to the RESP in respect of the other individual be taken into account in determining the amount of overcontributions to RESPs that have been made in respect of the new beneficiary.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Canada Education Savings Grants

The budget proposes significant measures to make registered education savings plans (RESPs) a more attractive vehicle for saving for children's education, by introducing Canada Education Savings Grants.

Background on Registered Education Savings Plans

Registered education savings plans provide a vehicle for individuals to accumulate income for post-secondary education. Contributions to RESPs are held in trusts in order to generate income to be used to finance the full-time post-secondary education costs of the beneficiaries under the plan. In practice, most contributors are parents saving for their children's education. Contributions to RESPs are not deductible from the income of the contributor and normally return to the contributor on a tax-free basis. However, the income generated by the contributions is tax sheltered until paid out to named beneficiaries, when it is included in beneficiaries' incomes. Since beneficiary students typically have little other income, they pay little or no tax on educational assistance payments out of an RESP.

To ensure that the amount of tax-assisted savings sheltered by an RESP bears a reasonable relationship to the costs of full-time post-secondary education, there is an overall lifetime limit of $42,000 on contributions per beneficiary. To encourage regular savings for education over a long period, contributions to a particular RESP may be made for up to 22 years, and there is an annual limit of $4,000 on contributions in respect of a beneficiary. The $4,000 limit provides flexibility by allowing taxpayers to make up for missed contributions, and recognizes that many parents may not be in a financial position to set money aside for their children's education when the children are very young. An RESP must be terminated by the end of the year that includes the twenty-fifth anniversary of the plan.

Canada Education Savings Grant

To provide additional assistance to individuals saving for children's education, the budget proposes a new Canada Education Savings Grant (CESG) for RESP contributions made after 1997. Subject to certain limits, the Canada Education Savings Grant will be equal to 20 per cent of annual contributions made to RESPs for beneficiaries up to and including age 17. The Canada Education Savings Grant will be provided directly to the plan trustee to be invested in the plan into which the relevant contributions are made. The Canada Education Savings Grant itself is not included in calculating the annual and lifetime RESP contribution limits. Together with the accumulating investment income, the Canada Education Savings Grant will be available to be paid to a student as part of educational assistance payments made out of the RESP. If the beneficiary does not pursue higher education or training, the Canada Education Savings Grant will be required to be repaid to the government.

Beginning January 1, 1998, each child under age 18 will accumulate CESG contribution room of $2,000 per year, up to and including the year in which they attain age 17. The CESG will be payable on contributions made in the year to the extent that the contributions in respect of the child do not exceed the lesser of $4,000 and the unused CESG contribution room available in the year. While unused CESG contribution room will be carried forward for use in future years, contributions made in one year that exceed the amount of available CESG contribution room cannot be carried forward for purposes of attracting a CESG payment in a subsequent year. Contributions made by any subscriber in respect of a beneficiary can qualify for the CESG. The maximum total amount of CESG that can be paid in respect of any individual born after 1997 will be $7,200 (i.e. 20 per cent x $2,000 x 18 years).

Example

A child is born in February 1999. The child's CESG contribution room for that year is $2,000. In March 1999, the father makes an RESP contribution of $800 in respect of the child. A CESG of $160 (20 per cent of $800) is paid to the plan trustee. In November of the same year, the child's grandmother makes a $2,500 contribution to another RESP on behalf of the child. Since only $1,200 of the child's CESG contribution room is available at the time of the grandmother's contribution, only $1,200 of the grandmother's contribution qualifies for a CESG. The remaining $1,300 will not qualify for a CESG in the following year.

If no contributions other than the father's contribution were made, the remaining $1,200 worth of CESG contribution room would be carried forward for use in the future.

CESGs will not be paid in respect of RESP beneficiaries for years in which they are age 18 or older since, at this point, most will be pursuing, or preparing to pursue, their post-secondary education. When beneficiaries are age 18 or older, family resources are typically directed to assisting children to meet current needs, not directed to saving for the future. However, to accommodate beneficiaries whose higher education begins after age 18, subscribers may continue to make RESP contributions up to the end of the year that includes the twenty-first anniversary of the plan, but are not eligible to receive the CESG for the years in which the child is age 18 or older.

To encourage systematic savings over the longer term, contributions in a year in respect of beneficiaries attaining age 16 or 17 in the year will receive a CESG only where:

- a minimum of $4,000 of RESP contributions were made in respect of the beneficiary before the year in which the beneficiary attains 16 years of age; or
- a minimum of $300 in annual RESP contributions were made in respect of the beneficiary in any four years before the year in which the beneficiary attains 16 years of age.

Subject to certain limits described below, CESGs paid into family plans (i.e. plans with multiple beneficiaries, all of whom are related to the subscriber by blood or adoption) on contributions made in respect of a particular beneficiary can be used for the education of other beneficiaries under the plan. Similarly, CESGs paid to an RESP that is part of a group arrangement may, under certain circumstances, be reallocated to other RESPs in the group arrangement.

CESGs will not be paid in respect of an RESP beneficiary who is not resident in Canada. In addition, CESGs will not be paid on contributions made after 1999 to an RESP submitted for registration before 1999 unless the plan has been amended in accordance with the registration requirements that apply to plans submitted for registration in January 1999.

To ensure compliance with administrative requirements in respect of CESG repayments, trustees for RESPs will be required to maintain a notional account recording all transactions relating to CESG payments made into and out of the plan.

Educational assistance payments

The income of an RESP can be paid out to a beneficiary once the beneficiary enrolled as a full-time student in a qualifying educational program at a designated educational institution. Such payments are referred to as educational assistance payments (EAPs). A specific portion of each EAP will be considered to be attributable to CESGs paid into the plan. The CESG portion of an EAP will be based on the ratio of CESGs paid into the plan to total investment earnings held in the plan, and will reduce the remaining balance in the plan's CESG account. In certain situations, the CESG portion of an EAP will be considered to be nil. This can occur, for example, when an EAP is paid to an RESP beneficiary who became a beneficiary under the plan after attaining 21 years of age, or when an EAP is paid to an RESP beneficiary who is not resident in Canada.

There will be a lifetime limit of $7,200 on the amount of CESG money that a student can receive out of RESPs. Since the maximum CESGs that will be paid into RESPs in respect of a beneficiary will also be limited to $7,200, this lifetime limit will be relevant only for beneficiaries where CESG money is "shared" with other beneficiaries (e.g., family plans and group plans). In this regard, each RESP will be required to limit the total portion of EAPs paid as CESGs to $7,200. Thus, for example, if the total amount of CESGs paid into a family plan with two beneficiaries was $10,000 and only one beneficiary pursues post-secondary education, only $7,200 of the CESGs may be paid to that beneficiary. The remaining $2,800 in the plan's CESG account would be required to be repaid.

If an individual is a beneficiary under more than one RESP, the total amount of CESGs paid to the individual may exceed $7,200, even though each plan must limit CESG payments to that amount. In such a case, the individual will be required to repay the excess amount to the government. Since EAPs (including the CESG portion) are included in computing the individual's taxable income, the individual will be entitled to claim an offsetting deduction for the excess amount.

CESG repayments

Generally, RESPs may retain CESG money until it is used to assist in the beneficiary's post-secondary education (through EAPs) or it has been determined that it will not be used for that purpose. This section describes in more detail the circumstances in which an RESP trustee will be required to make CESG repayments to the government.

When contributions are withdrawn for non-educational purposes from an RESP which has received a CESG, the RESP trustee will be required to make a CESG repayment equal to 20 per cent of the withdrawal. Where a plan also contains unassisted contributions (i.e. any contributions made before 1998, and contributions made after 1997 that were not eligible for a CESG), assisted contributions will be considered to be withdrawn before unassisted contributions.

Example

A father establishes an RESP for his new-born daughter in 1998 and contributes $1,500 a year for six years. Total CESGs paid to the plan equal $1,800. In 2005, the father withdraws $3,000 of contributions from the plan. In this situation, the RESP trustee is required to make a $600 CESG repayment to the government (20 per cent of $3,000).

An RESP trustee will also be required to repay CESG money in the following situations:

- when the plan is terminated or revoked;
- when a payment of RESP income is made for non-educational purposes;
- when a beneficiary under the plan is replaced, except where the new beneficiary is under 21 years of age and either the new beneficiary is a brother or sister of the former beneficiary or both beneficiaries are related to the subscriber by blood or adoption; and
- when there is a transfer from the plan to another RESP involving either a change of beneficiaries or a partial transfer of funds.

The requirement to repay CESG money when an RESP beneficiary does not pursue post-secondary education will generally not apply to group plans which operate on the basis of age cohorts, provided the CESG money is reallocated to other RESPs in the group arrangement. The $7,200 limit on the amount of CESG money that can be paid for educational purposes to any RESP beneficiary under the group arrangement will apply.

An RESP trustee will be prohibited from making a refund of contributions, or a payment of RESP income for non-educational purposes, that would result in the value of the remaining property in the RESP being insufficient to cover the CESG repayment requirement.

Loss of CESG contribution room

With certain exceptions as noted below, the withdrawal after February 23, 1998 of unassisted contributions from an RESP for non-educational purposes, or a transfer after that date of unassisted contributions from one RESP to another, will result in restrictions on future CESG payments in respect of beneficiaries under the plan. Specifically, contributions made to any RESP during the remainder of the year of the withdrawal, or in the following two years, in respect of such beneficiaries will not be eligible for the CESG. In addition, the beneficiaries will not earn new CESG contribution room for those two following years. However, these restrictions will not apply to a withdrawal in a year of unassisted contributions if the total withdrawals of unassisted contributions in the year are not more than $200. Nor will they apply where there is a full transfer of funds held in an RESP and there is no change in beneficiaries. These restrictions are intended to prevent unassisted RESP contributions from being recycled in order to attract a CESG and are designed to be administratively simple. The government intends to monitor future withdrawals of unassisted contributions with a view to determining whether further adjustments to the calculation of CESG assistance room may be warranted to take into account large withdrawals of such contributions.

Example

An RESP with two beneficiaries contains $10,000 of pre-1998 contributions. In March 1998, the RESP subscriber withdraws $4,000 from the plan and, in April 1998, recontributes that amount ($2,000 in respect of each beneficiary) to a newly established RESP.

Results:

1. Although the CESG contribution room available for each beneficiary in 1998 is $2,000, no CESG is paid on the contributions made to the new RESP. Furthermore, there will be no CESG paid on any other RESP contributions made in respect of either beneficiary before 2001.

2. Neither beneficiary earns new CESG room in 1999 or 2000. Thus, the amount of unused CESG contribution room carried forward to 2001 is $2,000.

Administrative and interim arrangements

The Canada Education Savings Grant program will be administered by the Department of Human Resources Development (HRD), while Revenue Canada will continue to administer the registration of RESPs and the auditing of compliance. The departments will be provided with the authority to share information necessary to ensure the integrity of the CESG program.

The government and the RESP industry will work together to put in place, as soon as possible, the administrative arrangements needed to implement this program. When these administrative arrangements are complete, CESGs will be paid on all eligible contributions made since January 1, 1998. Thereafter, the government will transfer CESG funds to the plans on a regular and ongoing basis. Authority will be provided to the government to pay interest in the event that there is any substantial delay in making CESG payments.

Trustees of RESPs to which CESGs are paid will be required to maintain notional accounts for each such plan recording contributions which have attracted a CESG, the amount of those CESGs and the extent to which CESG amounts are paid out to beneficiaries as part of educational assistance payments. In addition, RESP trustees will be required to report the following information for all plans on a timely basis: all transactions involving contributions or withdrawals of capital; and educational assistance payments and accumulated income payments, indicating the date of the transaction and the contributor and beneficiaries involved. HRD will be authorized to provide information to RESP trustees on whether CESG contribution room is available for any particular beneficiary.

While RESPs may be established without the Social Insurance Number (SIN) of the beneficiary, CESGs will only be paid when the SIN has been provided to the government.

Additional resources will be provided to HRD and Revenue Canada to ensure that the requirements associated with eligibility for educational assistance payments are met, that the RESP registration rules and the reporting requirements applicable to RESP trustees are complied with, and that systems are in place to audit compliance.

Additional RESP changes

A contributor may set up a "family plan" in which each of the beneficiaries is related to the subscriber by blood or adoption. Family plans, which are typically established for several siblings under age 18, are subject to the same contribution limits per beneficiary, but provide additional flexibility for the contributor because educational assistance payments need not be limited to the proportion of each child's "share" of the contributions. This allows a contributor who has named his or her three children as beneficiaries, for example, to direct the entire income to the two children pursuing education if the third child is not eligible. To ensure that family plans do not provide unintended benefits, no contributions may be made to a family plan in respect of a beneficiary who is added to that plan when that beneficiary is 21 years of age or older. The budget proposes to extend this restriction by prohibiting the addition of any beneficiary age 21 or older to a family plan. This change will apply to new plans submitted for registration after 1998.

As indicated earlier, contributions made after 1999 to an RESP submitted for registration before 1999 will not qualify for CESG payments unless the plan has been amended to restrict new beneficiaries to those under 21 years of age. In addition, no portion of an educational assistance payment made to an individual who became an RESP beneficiary after attaining 21 years of age will be attributable to CESG payments made to the plan.

The budget proposes to extend relief from the overcontribution penalty when an individual who is under 21 years of age replaces another individual as a beneficiary under an RESP and both beneficiaries are related to the subscriber by blood or adoption. Currently, the new beneficiary must be a brother or sister of the former beneficiary. This measure will provide comparable treatment of individual and family plans. The proposed measure will apply after 1997.

The purpose of an RESP is to help post-secondary students, and the vast majority of children named as beneficiaries do pursue higher education. However, if the beneficiary named by the subscriber does not pursue higher education, and no replacement beneficiary has been named, subscribers may receive the investment income under certain conditions. A number of conditions must be met before investment income can be returned to the subscriber, in the form of "accumulated income payments". In particular, the plan must have been existence for at least 10 years, all beneficiaries must be at least 21 years of age and not pursuing higher education, and the subscriber must be resident in Canada. If these conditions are met, the subscriber is allowed to receive an accumulated income payment. The subscriber may choose to transfer the payment to a registered retirement savings plan, without penalty, if the subscriber has sufficient room to absorb the amount of the transfer. To the extent that an accumulated income payment is not fully offset by RRSP deductions, a charge of 20 per cent applies in addition to the inclusion in income of the RESP amount. There is a lifetime limit of $40,000 of the amount of accumulated income payments that may be transferred to an RRSP tax free. To provide additional flexibility to individuals attempting to save for education and retirement with limited resources, the budget proposes to increase the lifetime limit to $50,000. This change will apply after 1998.

At present, a beneficiary may receive the entire amount of investment income in an RESP as an educational assistance payment in one payment, if the terms of the plan allow it. In some instances, a beneficiary enrolled in an educational program of as little as three weeks may qualify for an EAP. The additional assistance provided by the CESG requires more stringent criteria regarding eligible education and training programs in order to maintain the integrity of the tax and transfer system. Therefore, to ensure that bona fide short-term courses remain eligible while minimizing abuse of the advantages offered by contributions to an RESP, the budget proposes to limit EAPs in respect of courses of less than three months to the costs of tuition plus $300 per week of study (or any higher amount approved by HRD on a case-by-case basis). This change will apply to new plans submitted for registration after 1998. As previously noted, contributions made after 1999 to an RESP submitted for registration before 1999 will not qualify for CESG payments unless the plan has been amended to restrict EAPs in this manner.

Legislation to implement the Canada Education Savings Grant program will be tabled shortly.

Proposed Amendment — Use of Tax Returns for Election Register

October 1997: Memo to Canada's tax preparation industry from Jean-Pierre Kingsley, Chief Electoral Officer of Canada

Starting in 1998, Elections Canada is asking for taxfiler consent to help keep the National Register of Electors up to date. On page 1 of the 1997 income tax return, the question, which requires a yes or no answer, asks: "Do you agree to Revenue Canada providing, over the next 12 months, your name, address, and date of birth to Elections Canada to help keep up to date your information currently on the National Register of Electors?"

Elections Canada is asking you, as a tax-preparation professional or software developer, for your assistance in making sure that the consent box on page 1 is brought to the attention of taxfilers and that a choice is solicited.

The following background information is provided so that you can explain this initiative to your clients and to the purchasers of your software.

The Register of Electors is an automated database of electors maintained by Elections Canada. It was established under Bill C-63, An Act to Amend the Canada Elections Act, passed in December, 1996.

The legislation provides for the transfer of basic information — name, address and date of birth only — from Revenue Canada to Elections Canada, to keep the elector's listing in the Register up to date. The legislation stipulates that taxfiler consent is required for the data transfer to be made.

This updating is necessary because every year essential elector information, such as name and address, will change for more than four million Canadians. An accurate and complete Register will save taxfilers some $30 million for each federal election or referendum. These savings depend on a high percentage of taxfiler consent and participation, since Revenue Canada is an important source of up-to-date information for electors.

It is important to note that this mechanism is for the purpose of correcting information already on the Register. Checking the Yes box will not add a taxfiler's name to the Register, and checking the No box will not delete his or her name.

The consent mechanism will also identify taxfilers who have recently turned 18. These potential new electors will not be added to the Register until they respond to a letter that Elections Canada will send asking them to confirm their eligibility and their wish to be on the Register.

The privacy of elector information in the Register is provided for in the Canada Elections Act and the Privacy Act. Information in the National Register of Electors can be used only for electoral purposes. To protect the elector's privacy, authorization on the tax return will be required every year.

the taxpayer and the last annuitant under the plan are jointly and severally liable to pay a part of the annuitant's tax under this Part for the year of the annuitant's death equal to that proportion of the amount by which the annuitant's tax for the year is greater than it would have been if it were not for the operation of subsection 146(8.8) that the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined under paragraph (b) in respect of the taxpayer is of the amount included in computing the annuitant's income by virtue of that subsection, but nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to limit the liability of the annuitant under any other provision of this Act.

Part I.1 — Individual Surtax

180.1 (1) Individual surtax — Every individual shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to the total of

(a) 3% of the tax payable under Part I by the individual for the year, and

(b) 5% of the amount, if any, by which the tax payable under Part I by the individual for the year exceeds $12,500.

Proposed Amendment — Reduction in surtax

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Individual surtax

(2) That, for the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, the 3 per cent surtax required to be paid by an individual for the year be reduced by the amount by which exceeds

(a) $250

(b) 6% of the amount by which

(i) the individual's tax payable under Part I of the Act

exceeds

(ii) $8,333

except that, for the 1998 taxation year, this surtax reduction be equal to 50 per cent of the surtax reduction otherwise determined.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: General surtax

Individuals are currently required to pay a general surtax of 3% of basic federal tax. This surtax raises about $2.2 billion in annual revenues, and has been in place since 1986 when it was introduced as a temporary measure to reduce the deficit.

The budget proposes to eliminate the general surtax for individuals with income up to about $50,000. Individuals with income between approximately $50,000 and $65,000 will see their surtax reduced on a sliding scale.

To ensure that tax relief is focused on low- and middle-income levels, the surtax reduction will have a maximum value of $250 per taxable individual by 1999, and will be reduced at a rate of 6% of basic federal tax over $8,333. For 1998, individuals will receive half the full value of the 1999 surtax reduction.

Approximately 13 million individuals, or 83% of all taxable filers, will no longer pay any surtax whatsoever, while another one million individuals having incomes between approximately $50,000 and $65,000 will see their surtax reduced.

For a typical single individual earning $35,000, this measure provides an annual tax reduction of $150 (Table A7.3 [not reproduced — ed.]). A typical one-earner family of four with $50,000 in wage income will receive surtax relief of $238. (Table A7.4 [not reproduced — ed.])

This measure will provide tax relief of $710 million in 1998-1999, and $1,175 million in 1999-2000.

Proposed Amendment — Prescribed financial institutions

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: (34) That corporations prescribed to be financial institutions for the purposes of Part I.3 of the Act be treated after 1998 as financial institutions for the purposes of Part I of the Act, and as restricted financial institutions and specified financial institutions for all purposes of the Act.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Prescribed financial institutions

The large corporations tax (LCT) is levied at the rate of 0.225% on a corporation's "taxable capital employed in Canada" in excess of $10 million. For most corporations, taxable capital employed in Canada is the amount of a corporation's debt and equity, less the amount of its inter-corporate investments, that is considered to be used in connection with its activities carried on in Canada.

The tax base of a financial institution under the LCT is different. The most important difference is that a financial institution's taxable capital employed in Canada does not include short-term debt or secured long-term debt.

Corporations that are not "traditional" financial institutions, but compete with financial institutions in their day-to-day business, may be prescribed as financial institutions for the purposes of the LCT, in order to be subject to these special rules. This ensures that such corporations are subject to a tax regime comparable to that applying to their traditional financial institution competitors.

Currently, a corporation may be prescribed as a financial institution for LCT purposes without necessarily being treated as a financial institution for other purposes of the Act. Those other purposes include the "mark-to-market" rules in Part I of the Act, and the Act's special rules relating to preferred share financing. Such inconsistent treatment runs counter to the basic objective of prescribing these corporations: to tax them in the same manner as their competitors.

The budget proposes that companies that are prescribed financial institutions for the purposes of the LCT be treated as financial institutions for the purposes of Part I, and as specified financial institutions and restricted financial institutions for the purposes of the Act generally. This measure will apply after 1998.

History: Para. (e) of the definition "financial institution" in subsec. 181(1) amended by 1995, c. 21, s. 72, applicable to taxation years that end after June 1989. Para. (e) formerly read:

but does not include, where the corporation is a prescribed federal Crown corporation for the purpose of section 27, any indebtedness evidenced by obligations issued to and held by Her Majesty in right of Canada;

History: The definition "long-term debt" in subsec. 181(1) substituted by 1994, c. 21, s. 81, applicable after May 31, 1992. That definition formerly read:

183. (1) Every corporation that has in a taxation year redeemed or acquired any of its shares, other than a common share, at a premium, shall on or before the day on or before which it is required to file its return of income under Part I for the year, file a return of the transaction in prescribed form.

Part II.1 — Tax on Corporate Distributions

183.1 (1) Application of Part — This Part applies to a corporation (other than a mutual fund corporation) for a taxation year in which the corporation, at any time in the year,

(a) was a public corporation; or

(b) was resident in Canada and had a class of shares outstanding that were purchased and sold in the manner in which such shares normally are purchased and sold by any member of the public in the open market.

(2) Tax payable — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events,

(a) a corporation, or any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, has, at any time, paid an amount, directly or indirectly, to any person as proceeds of disposition of any property, and

(b) all or any portion of the amount may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation, the corporation shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file its return of income under Part I for its taxation year that includes that time, pay a tax of 45% of that amount or portion thereof, as the case may be.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions.

(3) Stock dividend — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events,

(a) a share was issued by a corporation as a stock dividend and the amount of the stock dividend was less than the fair market value of the share at the time that it was issued, and

(b) the share or any other share of the capital stock of the corporation was purchased, directly or indirectly, by the corporation, or by a person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, for an amount in excess of its paid-up capital, that excess shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation.

(4) Purchase of shares — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events,

(a) a share of the capital stock of a corporation was purchased, directly or indirectly, by the corporation, or any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, and

(b) any portion of the amount paid for the share may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, as consideration for a dividend that had been declared, but not yet paid, on the share, that portion of the amount shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation notwithstanding that the dividend was actually paid thereafter.

(5) Indirect payment — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events, a person received a payment from a corporation, or from any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, in consideration, in whole or in part, for paying an amount to any other person as proceeds of disposition of any property, the corporation shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have paid the amount indirectly to the other person.

(6) Where subsec. (2) does not apply — Subsection (2) does not apply if none of the purposes of the transaction or series of transactions or events referred to therein may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to have been to enable shareholders of a corporation who are individuals or non-resident persons to receive an amount, directly or indirectly, as proceeds of disposition of property rather than as a dividend on a share that was of a class that was listed on a stock exchange or that was purchased and sold in the manner in which shares are normally purchased and sold by any member of the public in the open market.

(7) Where subsec. 110.6(8) does not apply — Where this section has been applied in respect of an amount, subsection 110.6(8) does not apply to the capital gain in respect of which the amount formed all or a part of the proceeds of disposition.

(a) subsection 84(2) or (3) was not applicable in respect of the acquisition of the shares,

(b) the consideration for the acquisition of the shares exceeded the paid-up capital of the shares immediately before the acquisition, and

(c) one of the main purposes of the transaction or series of transactions or events can reasonably be considered to have been to enable shareholders of the acquiring corporation who are individuals to realize, either directly or indirectly, a distribution of corporate surplus by the acquiring corporation as proceeds of disposition of a share, the acquiring corporation shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file its return of income under Part I for its taxation year in which the shares were acquired, pay a tax of 50% of the amount by which the consideration for the acquisition of the shares exceeded their paid-up capital immediately before the acquisition.

(2) Idem — For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) where a person or partnership has acquired property that can reasonably be considered to have been substituted for a share of the capital stock of a corporation, the person or partnership shall be deemed to have acquired the share for which the property was substituted for consideration equal to the purchase price of the property; and

(b) a distribution of corporate surplus by an acquiring corporation shall be deemed to have occurred where the consideration for the acquisition of a share is provided or is to be provided, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by the acquiring corporation and that consideration exceeded the paid-up capital of the share immediately before the acquisition.

(3) Non-application of subsection (1) — Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an acquisition, at any time, of a share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation as a part of a series of transactions or events to the extent that the subsection has been applied with respect to any acquisition, before that time, of that share as part of the series.

(4) Restrictions — For greater certainty, subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an acquisition of a share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation where the acquisition was part of a series of transactions or events the principal purpose of which was to effect

(a) an acquisition of control of the acquiring corporation or a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by section 87) of the acquiring corporation, as the case may be, by one or more persons or partnerships (which persons or partnerships are referred to in this paragraph as the "purchaser") unless the purchaser was not dealing at arm's length with the person or partnership that controlled or all of the persons or partnerships that were part of a group that controlled the acquiring corporation or the predecessor corporation, as the case may be, immediately before the commencement of the series;

(b) the acquisition of all of the shares of the acquiring corporation owned by a person or partnership that was dealing at arm's length with the acquiring corporation in order to increase the degree of control of the acquiring corporation or a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by section 87) of the acquiring corporation, as the case may be, by those shareholders that controlled the acquiring corporation or the predecessor corporation, as the case may be, immediately before the commencement of the series; or

(c) the acquisition of a prescribed share of the capital stock of the acquiring corporation owned by an employee of the acquiring corporation or a corporation with which it did not deal at arm's length where the employee was dealing at arm's length with each such corporation immediately before the commencement of the series, and

(i) the consideration for the acquisition of the share did not exceed the lesser of the cost or adjusted cost base of the share to the employee immediately before the acquisition and the acquisition of the share was provided for in an employee share purchase agreement, under which the employee acquired the share, in order to protect the employee against any loss in respect of the share, or

(ii) the consideration for the acquisition of the share did not exceed its fair market value, immediately before the acquisition, and the acquisition of the share was provided for in an employee share purchase agreement, under which the employee acquired the share, in order to provide a market for the share.

(5) Amalgamation — Where an acquiring corporation has been formed as a result of an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by section 87) of two or more predecessor corporations,

(a) for the purposes of paragraph (4)(a), where the one or more persons or partnerships that controlled or were part of a group that controlled the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation did not control a predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation, that person or partnership or group of persons or partnerships that controlled the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation shall be deemed to have acquired control of that predecessor corporation; and

(b) for the purposes of paragraph (4)(b), where the shareholders that controlled the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation controlled a predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation and their degree of control of the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation exceeded their degree of control of the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation, those shareholders shall be deemed to have increased their degree of control of the predecessor corporation.

(6) Prevailing provisions — Subsection (1) does not apply to an acquisition of a share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation to the extent that subsection 84(8) or section 84.1 or 212.1 applied or subsection 110.6(8), 245(1.1) or 247(1) has been applied in respect of the acquisition or the transaction or series of transactions or events of which the acquisition was a part.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(rr) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation.

(3) Associated corporations — If all of the taxable Canadian corporations that are associated with each other in a taxation year and that have paid taxable dividends (other than excluded dividends) on taxable preferred shares in the year have filed with the Minister in prescribed form an agreement whereby, for the purposes of this section, they allocate an amount to one or more of them for the taxation year, and the amount so allocated or the total of the amounts so allocated, as the case may be, is equal to the total dividend allowance for the year of those corporations and all other taxable Canadian corporations with which each such corporation is associated in the year, the dividend allowance for the year for each of the corporations is the amount so allocated to it.

192. (1) Tax where dividend paid out of designated surplus — Where a corporation has at any time in a taxation year and after 1971 received from a corporation resident in Canada and controlled by it a taxable dividend the amount of which was or would have been, but for subsection 112(5), deductible under subsection 112(1) for the purpose of computing its taxable income for the year, the corporation by which the dividend was received shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file its return of income under Part I for the year, pay a tax under this Part of 25% on the portion of the dividend that was paid out of the designated surplus of the payer corporation.

(2) Where dividend received by trader or dealer in securities — Where a trader or dealer in securities (other than a corporation) has at any time in a taxation year and after 1971 received a taxable dividend from a corporation resident in Canada that would, if the trader or dealer had been a corporation, have been controlled by the trader or dealer, the trader or dealer shall, on or before the day on or before which he is required to file his return of income under Part I for the year, pay a tax under this Part of 25% on the portion of the dividend that was paid out of the designated surplus of the corporation.

(3) Where amalgamation of 2 or more corporations — For the purposes of this Part, where at any time in a taxation year and after 1971 there has been an amalgamation of 2 or more corporations at a time when one or more of the corporations (in this subsection referred to as a "controlled corporation") were controlled by another or others of those corporations (in this subsection referred to as a "controlling corporation"),

(a) each controlling corporation shall be deemed to have received a taxable dividend immediately before the amalgamation from each corporation controlled by it at that time,

(b) each such taxable dividend so received from a controlled corporation shall be deemed to have been paid out of the controlled corporation's designated surplus immediately before the amalgamation, and

(c) the amount of any such dividend so received by a controlling corporation from a corporation controlled by it shall be deemed to be the greater of

(i) the amount that would have been payable to it on the winding-up of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation if the subscribed capital had been repaid and what remained to be distributed on the winding-up were an amount equal to the designated surplus of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, and

(ii) the amount that would have been received by it as dividends on its shares of the capital stock of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, if at that time

(A) the maximum amount available for dividends were an amount equal to the designated surplus of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, and

(B) the controlled corporation had distributed that amount by way of dividends to its shareholders, in accordance with their respective rights to receive dividends.

(4) Where corporation controlled — For the purpose of this section, one corporation is controlled by another corporation if more than 50% of its issued share capital (having full voting rights under all circumstances) belongs to the other corporation, to persons with whom the other corporation does not deal at arm's length, or to the other corporation and persons with whom the other corporation does not deal at arm's length.

(5) When dividend paid out of designated surplus — For the purpose of this section,

(a) where the amount of a corporation's earnings for a control period that was available for payment of dividends was, at the time a particular taxable dividend was paid, equal to or greater than the particular dividend plus all other taxable dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend, no part of the particular dividend shall be regarded as having been paid out of designated surplus; and

(b) in any other case, the portion of the particular dividend that shall be deemed to have been paid out of designated surplus is that proportion of the lesser of

(i) the aggregate of the particular dividend and all other taxable dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend, minus the amount, if any, of the payer corporation's earnings for the control period that was available for payment of dividends at that time, and that the particular dividend is of the aggregate of the particular dividend and all other dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend.

(ii) the designated surplus of the payer corporation immediately before that time,

(6) Where dividends paid at same time on more than one class of shares — For the purpose of subsection (5), where a corporation has, at the same time, paid dividends on its issued shares of different classes and one of the classes of shares had full voting rights under all circumstances and another had not, the dividends on the shares of the class that had full voting rights under all circumstances shall be deemed to have been paid immediately after the dividends on the other shares.

(7) Idem — For the purpose of subsection (5), dividends paid on the same day shall, subject to subsection (6), be deemed to have been paid at the same time.

(8) Meaning of "control period" — In this section "control period" means the period from the commencement of the payer corporation's taxation year in which the control was acquired to the end of the taxation year in which the dividend was paid.

Proposed Amendment — Segregated fund policies

Department of Finance news release, December 19, 1996: Issuers of segregated fund policies will be allowed to elect to have their segregated funds registered under Part X.2 of the Act. The result of this election would be to exclude interests in registered segregated funds from the "foreign property" definition. However, as a consequence of the election in respect of a segregated fund, the issuer of the segregated fund would be required to pay any penalty tax under Part XI of the Act in respect of foreign property holdings of the segregated fund. [For the rest of this proposal, see under 206(1)"foreign property" — ed.]

Department of Finance news release, October 23, 1997: 4. Registered Investments

Under the proposed rules, Revenue Canada will be able to accept a segregated fund as a registered investment under subsection 204.4(1) of the Income Tax Act. If a segregated fund is accepted, an interest in the fund will not be a foreign property for the purposes of the Act. However, the insurer administering the segregated fund will be subject to tax under Part XI of the Act if the foreign property held by the segregated fund ever exceeds the 20 per cent foreign property limit.

The proposed amendments include a transitional provision. If a segregated fund that was created before 1997 is accepted by Revenue Canada as a registered investment under subsection 204.4(1) of the Act, the foreign property limit under Part XI in respect of the fund will be 60 per cent in 1999 and 40 per cent in 2000. [For the rest of this proposal, see under 206(1)"foreign property" — ed.]

204.9 (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this Part.

"excess amount" for a year at any time in respect of an individual means the amount, if any, by which the total of all contributions made after February 20, 1990 in the year and before that time into all registered education savings plans by or on behalf of all subscribers in respect of the individual exceeds the lesser of

(a) the RESP annual limit for the year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which the RESP lifetime limit for the year exceeds the total of all contributions made into registered education savings plans by or on behalf of all subscribers in respect of the individual in all preceding years.

Proposed Amendment — Where beneficiary replaced

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: Registered education savings plans (RESPs)

(11) That, where an individual under 21 years of age replaces another individual as a beneficiary under an RESP after 1997 and both individuals are connected to the RESP's subscriber by blood relationship or adoption, none of the contributions made to the RESP in respect of the other individual be taken into account in determining the amount of overcontributions to RESPs that have been made in respect of the new beneficiary.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: The budget proposes to extend relief from the overcontribution penalty when an individual who is under 21 years of age replaces another individual as a beneficiary under an RESP and both beneficiaries are related to the subscriber by blood or adoption. Currently, the new beneficiary must be a brother or sister of the former beneficiary. This measure will provide comparable treatment of individual and family plans. The proposed measure will apply after 1997.

(b) in determining a subscriber's share of an excess amount for a year, any payment included in the total described in paragraph (a) in respect of the year shall be excluded in determining the values for A and B in the definition "subscriber's share of the excess amount" in subsection (1).

(3) Refunds from unregistered plans — For the purposes of subsection (1) and section 146.1, where an individual entered into an education savings plan before February 21, 1990, pursuant to a preliminary prospectus issued by a promoter, and the promoter refunds all payments made into the plan and all income accrued thereon to the individual, each payment made by the individual into a registered education savings plan before December 31, 1990 shall be deemed to be a payment made before February 21, 1990, to the extent that the total of all such payments does not exceed the amount so refunded to the individual.

(4) New beneficiary — For the purposes of this Part, if at any particular time an individual (in this subsection referred to as the "new beneficiary") becomes a beneficiary under a registered education savings plan in place of another individual (in this subsection referred to as the "former beneficiary") who ceased at or before the particular time to be a beneficiary under the plan,

(a) except as provided by paragraph (b), each contribution made at an earlier time by or on behalf of a subscriber into the plan in respect of the former beneficiary is deemed also to have been made at that earlier time in respect of the new beneficiary;

(b) except for the purpose of applying this subsection to a replacement of a beneficiary after the particular time, applying subsection (5) to a distribution after the particular time and applying subsection 204.91(3) to events after the particular time, paragraph (a) does not apply as a consequence of the replacement at the particular time of the former beneficiary where the new beneficiary had not attained 21 years of age at the particular time and a parent of the new beneficiary was a parent of the former beneficiary; and

(b) where at any time property is transferred from a trust governed by a registered education savings plan (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferor plan") to a trust governed by another registered education savings plan (in this paragraph referred to as the "transferee plan"), unless a beneficiary under the transferee plan was, immediately before that time, a beneficiary under the transferor plan, all payments made before that time in respect of all beneficiaries under the transferor plan shall be deemed to have been made in respect of the beneficiaries under the transferee plan.

(5) Transfers between plans — For the purposes of this Part, if property held by a trust governed by a registered education savings plan (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor plan") is distributed at a particular time to a trust governed by another registered education savings plan (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee plan"),

(c) except for the purpose of applying this subsection to a distribution after the particular time, applying subsection (4) to a replacement of a beneficiary after the particular time and applying subsection 204.91(3) to events after the particular time, paragraph (b) does not apply as a consequence of the distribution where

(i) any beneficiary under the transferee plan was, immediately before the particular time, a beneficiary under the transferor plan, or

(ii) a beneficiary under the transferee plan had not attained 21 years of age at the particular time and a parent of the beneficiary was a parent of an individual who was, immediately before the particular time, a beneficiary under the transferor plan;

(d) where subparagraph (c)(i) or (ii) applies in respect of the distribution, the amount of the distribution is deemed not to have been withdrawn from the transferor plan; and

Proposed Amendment — "foreign property" — segregated fund annuity contracts

Department of Finance news release, December 19, 1996:
(c) Foreign Property

An interest in an annuity contract will be "foreign property" for the purposes of the Act if the annuity contract is a segregated fund policy and more than 20% of the segregated fund's assets are "foreign property". As a consequence, if an RRSP or RRIF trust or any other taxpayer described in paragraphs 204(1)(a) to (f) of the Act acquires such a foreign property, it will be included in the 20% foreign property limit set out in Part XI of the Act.

If an insurer issues interests in one or more registered annuity policies directly to an RRSP or RRIF annuitant or to a registered pension plan (RPP), the insurer will be likewise liable to pay a monthly foreign property penalty tax in respect of each RRSP annuitant, RRIF annuitant and RPP equal to the amount, if positive, determined by the formula:

$$1\% \times (A - (20\% \times B))$$

where

A is the total of all premiums and other amounts paid on account of the acquisition by the RRSP annuitant, RRIF annuitant or RPP, as the case may be, of such of those interests outstanding at the end of the month as constitute foreign property, and

B is the total of all premiums and other amounts paid on account of the acquisition by the RRSP annuitant, RRIF annuitant or RPP, as the case may be, of such of those interests as are outstanding at the end of the month.

Issuers of segregated fund policies will be allowed to elect to have their segregated funds registered under Part X.2 of the Act. The result of this election would be to exclude interests in registered segregated funds from the "foreign property" definition. However, as a consequence of the election in respect of a segregated fund, the issuer of the segregated fund would be required to pay any penalty tax under Part XI of the Act in respect of foreign property holdings of the segregated fund.

Department of Finance news release, October 23, 1997:
Application of Foreign Property Limit to Segregated Funds

1. Introduction

The new foreign property rules for segregated funds will apply in three situations.

First, they will apply where an interest in a segregated fund is held by a tax-exempt taxpayer described in paragraphs 205(a) to (f) of the Income Tax Act, such as a registered pension plan (RPP), a trust governed by a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) or a trust governed by a registered retirement income fund (RRIF). Such taxpayers are subject to tax under Part XI of the Act if they invest too heavily in "foreign property". Under the proposed changes, an interest in a segregated fund will, in some circumstances, become a "foreign property" and the holding of such an interest can result in Part XI tax becoming payable.

A similar penalty tax may apply where an interest in a segregated fund policy is held directly as an RRSP or RRIF (i.e., outside of an RRSP or RRIF trust), or where such an interest is issued under an RPP that is not an RPP trust or corporation. The tax will generally be collected by the insurer that issued the segregated fund policy on behalf of the policyholder that is liable to pay it.

Third, the new rules can result in Part XI tax for an insurer where the Minister accepts a segregated fund administered by the insurer as a "registered investment" under proposed amendments to Part X.2 of the Act.

The application of the proposed rules to these three situations is described below.

2. Tax payable under Part XI of the Income Tax Act by trusts governed by RRSPs, RRIFs and RPPs

General

A trust governed by an RRSP, RRIF or RPP is generally liable to pay a penalty tax under subsection 206(2) of the Act in respect of a month where the cost amount to the trust of the "foreign property" (as defined in subsection 206(1)) held by the trust exceeds 20 per cent of the cost amount to the trust of all property held by it.

Under paragraph (i) of the definition "foreign property", an interest in a trust is a foreign property, except where the trust is a "registered investment" or where the interest in the trust is prescribed not to be a foreign property under the Income Tax Regulations. Under the proposed amendments, after 1998, an interest in a segregated fund will be a treated as an interest in a trust for the purpose of Part XI. As a consequence, a trust governed by an RRSP, RRIF or RPP that holds a segregated fund policy in any month that ends after 1998 may be liable to pay the penalty tax under Part XI.

When is an Interest in a Segregated Fund Prescribed Not to be a Foreign Property?

The proposed amendments include a number of transitional provisions described below. However, section 5000 of the Regulations will prescribe an interest in a segregated fund held at a particular time not to be a foreign property in two cases:

- where the particular time is after 1999 and, throughout the last year that ended before the particular time (or at the end of the year that includes the particular time, if the fund was created in the year that includes the particular time), the total cost amount of all the foreign property held by the segregated fund does not exceed 20 per cent of the cost amount of all the property held by it; or
- where each policyholder holding an interest in the segregated fund at the particular time held an interest in the fund at the end of 1996 or acquired the interest from another policyholder who held an interest in the fund before 1997.

Transitional rules are proposed for 1999, 2000 and 2001 to give insurers an opportunity to shift the properties held by the segregated funds that they administer from foreign properties to non-foreign properties. To this end, an interest in a segregated fund will be prescribed not to be a foreign property in 1999 where:

- the segregated fund was created before 1997 and, at any time in the first 90 days of 1998, the fair market value (FMV) of all the foreign property held by the fund does not exceed 80 per cent of the FMV of all the property held by the fund;
- the segregated fund was created in 1997 or 1998 and, at any time in the first 90 days of its 1998 taxation year, the FMV of all the foreign property held by the fund does not exceed 20 per cent of the FMV of all of the property held by the fund; or
- the segregated fund was created in 1999 and, at the end of 1999, the cost amount of all of the foreign property held by the fund does not exceed 20 per cent of the cost amount of all of the property held by the fund.

In 2000, an interest in a segregated fund will be prescribed not to be a foreign property if the segregated fund was created before 1997 and, throughout 1999, the cost amount of all the foreign property held by the segregated fund does not exceed 60 per cent of the cost amount of all the property held by the fund.

In 2001, an interest in a segregated fund will be prescribed not to be a foreign property if the segregated fund was created before 1997 and, throughout 2000, the cost amount of all the foreign property held by the segregated fund does not exceed 40 per cent of the cost amount of all the property held by the segregated fund.

"Cost Amount" for the Purposes of Part XI of the Act

Under the proposed amendments, where an interest in a segregated fund is, after 1998, treated as "foreign property", the "cost amount" of the interest will be determined on a lagged basis.

Specifically, the "cost amount" of an interest in a segregated fund to an RRSP trust, RRIF trust or RPP will be its adjusted cost base (ACB), except that the ACB adjustments that would otherwise be required in a particular calendar year will not be made until after March of the following calendar year. An interest in a segregated fund will have a known constant ACB throughout each year as ACB adjustments in respect of the year will not be made until the following year, making it possible for taxpayers subject to the foreign property penalty tax to comply with the foreign property limit on an on-going basis.

3. New Foreign Property Limits with respect to Segregated Fund Policies Issued or Effected as RRSPs or RRIFs and Policies Issued under RPPs

Segregated Fund Policies Issued or Effected as RRSPs or RRIFs

The new rules will also apply where, after 1998, an individual holds an interest in a segregated fund directly as an RRSP or RRIF (i.e., outside a RRSP or RRIF trust). In general, the policyholder's liability for penalty tax will be determined on a policy-by-policy basis. Where the penalty tax is owing, the insurer that issued the segregated fund will be required to collect the penalty tax on behalf of the policyholder.

A policyholder will be liable to pay the penalty tax in respect of a segregated fund policy for any month where the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis as described above) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds under the policy that are foreign properties exceeds 20 per cent of the total of

- the cash surrender value of the policy at the end of the month (not including any amount in respect of an interest in a segregated fund), and
- the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds under the policy.

For this purpose, whether an interest in a segregated fund is a foreign property is determined using the definition of "foreign property" described above.

Where an insurer has issued interests in more than one segregated fund policy, the insurer will be able to treat those policies as one policy for purposes of calculating how much penalty tax is payable. The election will allow policies that derive their value largely from foreign property to be offset by policies that derive their value largely from non-foreign property.

Segregated Fund Policies Issued under RPPs

The administrator of an RPP (other than an RPP trust or corporation) may also be liable to pay foreign property tax where the RPP is funded or partially funded by an interest in a segregated fund policy.

The administrator's liability will be determined on an insurer-by-insurer basis. As a consequence, all the segregated fund policies used to fund the RPP that were issued by a particular insurer will be grouped together for this purpose. The administrator will be liable to pay tax in a given month in respect of the policies issued by a particular insurer where the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis as described above) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds that arise under the policies and that are foreign properties exceeds 20 per cent of the total of

- the cash surrender values, at the end of the month, of all the policies (not including any amount in respect of an interest in a segregated fund), and
- the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds that arise under the policies.

For this purpose, whether an interest in a segregated fund is a foreign property will be determined using the definition of "foreign property" described above.

Where an RPP is funded with segregated fund policies issued by more than one insurer, the administrator of the RPP will be able to elect to treat all such insurers as one insurer for purposes of determining its penalty tax liability. Where the policies issued by one insurer have a high foreign property content, the election will make it possible for an administrator to offset that high foreign property content with the non-foreign property content of policies issued by other insurers.

The responsibility for collecting and remitting an administrator's penalty tax falls on the insurer, unless the administrator makes the election to treat all insurers as one. Where this election is made, the responsibility for collecting and remitting the penalty tax falls on the administrator.

Part XI.2 — Tax in respect of Dispositions of Certain Properties

207.3 Tax payable by institution or public authority — Any institution or public authority that, at any time in a year, disposes of an object within 5 years after the object became an object described in subparagraph 39(1)(a)(i.1) shall, in respect of that year, pay a tax under this Part equal to 30% of the fair market value of the object at the time the object was so disposed of, unless the disposition was made to another institution or public authority that was, at the time of the disposition, designated under subsection 32(2) of the Cultural Property Export and Import Act either generally or for a specified purpose related to that object.

Proposed Amendment — Holding period extended to 10 years

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 24, 1998: (29) That the period during which an institution or public authority will incur a liability to pay a penalty tax under Part XI.2 of the Act, if it disposes of a property which it received as a gift of certified cultural property, be increased from five years to ten years from the date of acquisition of the property, applicable to dispositions by such institutions or authorities that occur after February 23, 1998.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 24, 1998: Strengthening the integrity of the certified cultural property regime

The budget proposes two measures to secure the benefits of Canadian cultural property donations for all Canadians and to ensure that the generous tax incentives for charitable donations are based on the fair market value of the property donated, as determined by the Canadian Cultural Property Export Review Board.

It is important that Canadian cultural properties are retained in Canada and made accessible to the public. Consequently, tax incentives are provided to encourage the donation of cultural property that meets certain criteria contained in the Cultural Property Export and Import Act to designated institutions such as museums and art galleries. In addition to the charitable donations tax credit for individuals and the charitable donations tax deduction for corporations, capital gains that arise through donations of eligible cultural property to designated institutions are exempt from capital gains taxation. An institution that receives a donation of cultural property is required to retain it for a minimum period of five years. If disposition is made within the five-year period, the institution is liable to pay a special penalty tax.

The budget will increase the effectiveness of this policy by lengthening, from five to 10 years, the period during which cultural property must be retained by designated institutions to avoid the imposition of the penalty tax. The longer period will apply in respect of dispositions made after February 23, 1998. Extending the mandatory retention period will ensure that these donated cultural properties will remain accessible to the public.
